About the Show:

Forty-ish Becky Foster has a decent job at an auto dealership, a solid husband named Joe, and a freeloading psych-major son living in her basement. Her life is...okay, if not sublime. But when she crosses paths with billionaire widower Walter Flood, she's offered the chance to test drive a very different kind of existence - if she can just keep him in the dark about the one she already has! Playful and painful, wacky and wistful, this world premiere comedy by longtime Seattle playwright Steven Dietz reminds us that the road not taken can be full of hairpin turns.

Character Descriptions:

Becky Foster – A forty something looking woman with quick comic timing, a range of emotions and very charismatic. Becky works for a car dealership

Joe Foster – a forty something looking man, down to earth, a good husband that means well but settled in his ways. Joe is a roofer

Chris Foster – mid-twenties son who is also a psychology student and lives in the basement

Walter Flood – A wealthy businessman, who is in his late 50's and widowed

Kenni Flood – Walters's daughter in her early twenties – She only appears in the second act.

Steve – 50ish car salesman who works with Becky

Ginger – Walter's neighbor in her fifties – She only appears in the second act
